

Do you want a science fiction dystopia?

Net neutral is vital for the free exchange of ideas that brought about our great nation. You may argue that the cost of hosting that data is not free. I'm aware of that. I pay egregious monthly bills to access what the UN has declared a basic human right. If providers cannot survive in a market that does not allow for cronyism and extortive business practices, they deserve to fail. Please respect the wishes of the American public and the best course towards our future. Let ideas free.

Preserve net neutrality.

- Kevin Guhin, railroad inspector

